

I would most sincerely hope that the FCC would vote against the relaxing the rules regarding broadcast ownership. One only needs to look at what happened with radio to see examples of content degradation. Go to any city in this country and you will hear the same shows, the same music. Why? Because the stations are owned by the same people with a select group deciding what goes out over the airwaves. To think one group could also own broadcast media, radio and newspapers is truly frightening. Perhaps in one day, these regulations could be relaxed, but from everything I've read on this subject now is not yet the time.
